

Ours ♦♦ Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight♦♦s debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he♦♦ll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight♦♦s debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi♦♦s claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes♦♦ tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

Saliency ♦♦ Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight♦♦s debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he♦♦ll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight♦♦s debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi♦♦s claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

Guided Backprop. Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he'll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi's claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

Int. Gradients Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he'll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe

Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi's claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

DeepLIFT Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he'll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi's claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

DeepLIFT-SHAP Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he'll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation. Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi's claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list

Gradient-SHAP Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance. In an article on his website and in a tweet, conservative radio host Todd Starnes said Joe Biden already knows what he'll be asked in the presidential debate. "Word on the street is that Joe Biden got tonight's debate questions in advance," Starnes tweeted Sept. 29, the morning of the first debate between President Donald Trump and the Democratic nominee Biden. Word on the street is that @JoeBiden got tonight's debate questions in advance - per @KXEL1540— toddstarnes (@toddstarnes) September 29, 2020 There is no basis for the accusation.

Fox News host Chris Wallace is the debate moderator and the network rejected the idea that anyone shared questions with Biden or his team. "This is entirely false and any assertion otherwise is patently absurd," a Fox News spokesperson said in a statement. As evidence, Starnes cited a Sept. 24 interview with Jerome Corsi. Corsi, a conservative who has shared conspiracy theories himself gave no firm source. (PolitiFact has rated three of Corsi's claims False and one Pants on Fire) "The information I've just gotten, and I think it's mostly it's always been accurate, is that Joe Biden has been given the questions from Fox's Chris Wallace," Corsi said. "He's being prepared on the exact questions, he's gonna be asked." On Sept. 22, Wallace released the topics for the debate. They include: The Trump and Biden records Featured Fact-check Tucker Carlson stated on October 27, 2022 in a TV segment The United States is "about to run out of diesel fuel ... by the Monday of Thanksgiving week." By Andy Nguyen • November 7, 2022 The Supreme Court COVID-19 The economy Race and violence in our cities The integrity of the election Starnes's tweet has over 25,000 likes, and other websites and Facebook users repeated his claim. Starnes denies making a statement of his own about Biden. "We quoted verbatim from the report Mr. Corsi made to KXEL and we did so accurately," Starnes said. He said he had reached out to Fox News, and did not get a reply. When Fox News released a statement, he put that at the top of his website article. Our ruling Starnes said Biden received debate questions in advance. Fox News host Wallace did release a list